He was taken to the Methodist Hospital and when his father came to see him, bravely trying to hide his suffering, he begged his father to forgive him for the expense the treatment of his injuries might incur. His mother before her marriage was Miss Lena Crosta, of this place, and her son had visited here several times, being a bright happy child, who attracted attention.

THE LINCOLN WAY HEARING

BEFORE THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE OF HOUSE AT WASHINGTON

The Lincoln Way the Only Appropriate Memorial Presented by a Strong Array of Views.

From Special Washington Correspondent. Mr. Borland's bill to enlarge the scope of the bill creating a commission for the erection of a suitable memorial to President Lincoln, was given a hearing by the Library Committee of the House on Tuesday, March 5. As this matter now stands the original bill governing the erection of this memorial confines the site to the city of Washington. Mr. Borland's bill No. 13,045, aims to include the road to Gettysburg as one of the plans to be submitted to the decision of Congress.

Mr. Talbott, representative from Maryland was the first to be called. As a Confederate soldier he said he favored the proposed highway because of the study it would permit of the great struggle. Everybody has monuments. The road to Gettysburg would be both ornamental and useful. Aside from the pleasure it would give the common people, the road would be a source of instruction to historians, army officers, and students of every nation. In his opinion there would be no trouble to get it through Congress if this committee would report favorably the present bill.

Representative Borland of Missouri, the author of the bill, then went into an extended explanation of it, and eloquently urged its favorable consideration. Washington, he said, always will be a beautiful city, but there is danger of having too many monuments here. He recalled a remark made some years ago by the chairman of this committee that over one-half of the monuments here should be moved to some large field where they might not daily offend the artistic taste. No matter how much money is spent here upon monuments the next generation of artists ridicules them. The monument is the most hackneyed form of memorial, having no meaning. Especially inappropriate would be the proposed Grecian temple as a memorial to Lincoln. Lincoln was far removed from any notion of the classic. Besides any large monument in Potomac Park would come in competition with the Washington Monument and suffer thereby. Lincoln was close to the people and the highway project has especial appropriateness on this account. The nearer it comes to the useful, the better the memorial. This road could be made the most beautiful monument in the world. No memorial is so imperishable as a highway. He then took up the subject of the cost and said that individual states were building good roads for about $6,000 to $8,000 dollars a mile. The maintenance would be reasonable. The right of way would not cost a cent; that route should be followed where the right of way was given without cost. He added that the highway had the endorsement of the G. A. R., the Loyal Legion, American Federation of Labor, good roads commissions, American Automobile Association, and many other fraternal and patriotic organizations. He read letters from Gen. Gillman and many grand commanders of the G. A. R.

Gen. Hopkins, chairman of the G. A. R. committee of the Lincoln highway, was next heard. As part of his remarks he filed the pamphlet prepared by Mr. McCleary reviewing the entire subject. The G. A. R. has endorsed unanimously the highway form of memorial. Their interests should be considered because they helped to make Lincoln's name and fame. The tie between Lincoln and his soldiers was very close. The proposed Grecian monument is not appropriate to show the character of the man. If the road should be built fully 75 percent of the visitors to Washington would go to Gettysburg, and thus the road would be a great education in patriotism.

Gen. Jno. R. Black, chairman of the Civil Service Commission made the most eloquent speech of the day from the sentimental viewpoint. He told the committee it was the dream of the G. A. R. to see a great boulevard extending from Gettysburg through Washington to Richmond, binding the North and South in reconciliation and friendship. A memorial to be of any value should be typical. Lincoln was plain, simple, of every day life and habit, and a man of utilities. Imagine him face to face with the choice. He would never select a structure of another age and nation as is proposed in a Grecian temple. The highway would type the relations of Lincoln. It would be a monument representing toil and the every day needs of men as Lincoln would desire. It would also be an enduring monument. The Forum and other Roman monuments are fallen in decay, but the highways of that nation still exist. Nothing would be more grateful to the memory of Lincoln than this highway and its lessons of art, peace and commerce.

J. H. Ralston, counsel for the American Federation of Labor, said that organization favored the highway as against any other form of memorial. Lincoln was a utilitarian; and he would be more gratified with a memorial useful to present and future generations.

Wm. J. Creasy, master of the Pa. State Grange, said he represented 70,000 farmers who favored the Lincoln road as a demonstration in good roads and as a memorial in keeping with Lincoln's character.

Louis P. Shoemaker, in behalf of the Loyal Legion, presented a resolution adopted by many Citizen Associations favoring the Lincoln Way. The speaker said he had always lived in the District and was interested in its beauty and improvement, but he was opposed to any other form of memorial to Lincoln. Particularly was he opposed to anything to be built upon the swamps of the Mall. Any other large monument here would detract from the Washington monument, and a small monument is out of the question. He was in favor of having the boulevard begin at Ft. Stevens where Lincoln stood as commander-in-chief during Early's raid—the only time a President in office ever filled this charge. As a possible ornamentation of the road he mentioned statues of all our presidents.

George C. Diehl, road engineer in the service of the New York State Highway Commission and representing also the American Automobile Association showed why the road should be built for commercial and practical reasons. He left with the committee maps showing that the proposed route was on the main road running North and South intersecting with the main route East and West. The committee made some effort to show that the speaker's interest arose from his connection with the automobile association, and that much of the sentiment for this road came from the automobilists of the country who were not prompted by any patriotic consideration. Mr. Diehl then went into the details of cost and maintenance. A road 24 feet wide, 8 inches deep treated with a 3 inch bituminous binder making it dust proof and durable could be built for 20,000 dollars a mile. The cost of maintaining the road would be 250 dollars per mile each year. It would have to be resurfaced every ten years at a cost of $5,000 dollars a mile, or 500 dollars per year, making the cost of maintenance and reconstruction 750 dollars per mile each year. In answer to a question concerning the advisability of a wider road, he thought a wider right of way should be secured for purposes of decoration, but that the road itself should not be wider than 24 ft. The N. Y. state roads averaged 12 to 16 ft. in width and were sufficient to handle greater traffic than this road would be called upon to bear. This road would also fit in with the Maryland and Pennsylvania systems of roads.

Former Representative James T. McCleary, of Minnesota, who after a study of foreign memorials first proposed the road idea, made a strong plea for the bill. The question, he said, was whether this form of memorial shall be precluded from consideration. As the law now stands the memorial must be built in Washington. All he asked was that Congress be given chance to pass upon question. Lincoln, the best loved American, was "of the people and for the people," and any monument to him should be of the same character. Artists are like musicians, wherever two or three are gathered together there is discord. There would be no agreement among them on the form of monument to be erected. He spoke of his tour abroad and of the idea that came to him while viewing the Appian Way. Whatever the width of the road-bed the highway itself should be 200 ft. wide. The greatest adornment of that road in his mind would be two rows of fine trees, a mile of oaks, a mile of maples, etc. Asked concerning the rights of way Mr. McCleary replied that he had the assurances of representative citizens of both states that these would cheerfully be granted without cost. He denied that he was interested in any property along the route or in automobiles. A great deal was said to him by the committee on the subject of the Lincoln Memorial Road Association of America and on the means employed to work up sentiment for the road and to influence members of Congress in its behalf. He criticized the proposed temple to Lincoln and added that the gentlemen on the Fine Arts Commission whose names carried most weight have endorsed the boulevard. He also stated that a memorial road was to be built along the Palisades of the Hudson in honor of Henry Hudson; and in conclusion asked that the fashion be set of making useful memorials.

Adjournment was taken until 2:30. Hon. Daniel F. Lafean was the first to appear at the afternoon session. He said he introduced the first bill for a Lincoln highway over five years ago. Showing the cost of good roads he gave to the committee estimates of roads built upon the battlefield. Gettysburg, he said, was a beautiful spot which attracts over 250,000 visitors each year. The government has spent over eleven millions of dollars in beautifying it. But to make a trip there is now a matter of three days, one day each for coming and going and a day to be spent seeing the battlefield. This Lincoln Way will remedy conditions in that respect. Answering the oft repeated question of the committee as to the method of protecting abutting property from objectionable features as road-houses, parks, amusements, etc., Mr. Lafean said there were no nuisances of these kinds along the battlefield roads and he did not think there would be any along the proposed boulevard. He, too, was asked about the right of way and replied that he had assurances that there would be no cost for this. One widow in Adam Co. had told him she would give half her farm if necessary. He had a letter from a farmer along the Mason and Dixon line offering his land for the purpose and suggesting as a future ornament at the line an arch surmounted by figures of Lincoln and Davis clasping hands. Mr. Lafean further spoke of Pennsylvania's plan of building good roads. In conclusion he referred to the coming celebration of the 50th anniversary of the battle and hoped some beginning of the Lincoln Way would be a part of that celebration.

Mr. Logan Page, U. S. Director of Roads, gave a very interesting talk on road building. He was kept busy answering questions showing that the committee were anxious to learn the practical side of the question. The cost of a road, he said, like the cost of a house depended upon the kind one wanted to build, upon the materials, labor, location, etc. Beyond any doubt a road such as was described by Mr. Diehl could be built for $20,000 per mile. He thought a 16 ft. road was sufficient for any purpose. A road of this width, properly drained, 8 inches deep with a 3 inch binder would answer any purpose. A road of this width from Paris to Versailles carries over 10,000 automobiles every Sunday. He went into the character of roads, gave the history of famous roads and told what his department was doing by way of experiment in road building. As to the proposed road to Gettysburg much of the cost would depend upon the character and quantity of the material along the route. He thought this was abundant and first-class, but would send to the committee data concerning it. He described the building of the Appian Way, which he said would cost today $250,000 a mile. But there is no need today of roads like the Romans built. Ours are better for purposes of traffic and hauling.

Mr. Arthur Stabler, of Montgomery Co., Md., called attention to the rich counties this road would open up for the farmers. At present he and the farmers in his neighborhood were forced to haul their grain and produce 12 miles to reach the railroad. As a suggestion for one feature of adornment he proposed that each state erect decorative mile stones.

Mr. Lewis, representative from Maryland, concluded the hearing. Lincoln, he said, was unique, and the method of memorializing him should be unique. A monument would be compared with other monuments, and there would be danger of disappointment. A memorial to Lincoln, like his character, should be beyond comparison. In 1876 this country went to the very font of music and paid Wagner $5,000 for a Centennial March. It was a miserable failure. The proposed road would be a natural monument over 70 miles long.

Notes.

Ex-Gov. Warfield, of Maryland, was present at the hearing but was forced to leave before he was called.

The American Automobile Association was also represented by Pres. R. P. Hooper and A. G. Batchelder.

Considerable opposition to the plan was shown by one or two members of the committee. From the character of questions asked it could easily be seen that the recommendation of the Fine Arts Commission will carry weight with some members of the committee. The idea also seemed to prevail with some that the sentiment was played up and not spontaneous; and that it would benefit mostly the automobilists who see in it a splendid speedway. The success of the measure, in my judgment, will depend upon the action of this committee. From all I can hear Congress is favorable to the road, and if given the opportunity by this committee will adopt Mr. Borland's bill.

I had a long talk with Mr. McCleary. He is confident the idea which originated with him will succeed. He told me one of the proudest memories of his life was the opportunity he had three years ago of making the Lincoln centennial address at Gettysburg.

I talked also with Mr. Lafean on the subject of the boulevard. He, too, is sure of its ultimate success. The question of rights of way is going to play an important part in the final determination of the question. Whether correctly or not members of Congress are being assured these will cost nothing. The committee frequently referred to this feature.

LIFE STORY OF LITTLE GIRL

WINIFRED SACKVILLE STONER
NOW IN HER 11TH YEARWhose Father Dr. James B. Stoner
Surgeon in U. S. Navy was a Native of Adams County.

Winifred Sackville Stoner, Jr. 11 years old, speaks, writes, and understands several languages. She has written and had published three books—one of verse, one of prose, and one in Esperanto. She plays compositions of the old masters on the piano. She whistles like a tomboy. She is mischievous. She disobeys her mother. She leaves doors open. She is splendidly healthy.

At the same time she has opposed skilled players at chess, she speaks Japanese verse, she scans Virgil correctly, and has a mind and thought perfectly attuned to rhythm and meter. Also, she never has attended a school of any description.

Knowing these facts, how would one answer the following question: Is Winifred Sackville Stoner, Jr., a prodigy; or is she only the correctly developed, normal, natural child?

Artists seeing only the result of the imagination and the trained or inspired hand, musicians knowing only that which relates to the soul and training, literati centering attention only upon letters and culture, savants considering only the result, scanning only that which has gone before. (It is logical to believe,) would declare, "Prodigious!"

Mrs. Winifred Sackville Stoner, Sr., and Dr. James Buchanan Stoner, surgeon in the United States Navy, and head of the United States Marine Hospital at Pittsburgh, (her parents,) deny the allegation. Mrs. Stoner asserts that her talented daughter is the result of a natural care and instruction. Dr. Stoner revolts at the description and declares that his child is her "mother's daughter." Each and both resent the word "prodigy," and the father avers that his daughter is not different from that which other children with the same motherly care would be.

Mrs. Stoner declares that mother love is the heaven which makes the child. She asserts that the mother owes it to her offspring to mold the child. She says, in substance: "Like mother, like child." But she puts it differently; "As the twig bendeth so the tree groweth."

Mrs. Stoner, asserting that her "child came into this world without its knowledge and consent," says she is deserving of all which the mother possesses—care, attention, instruction, and companionship. Mrs. Stoner goes further. She declares that mothers perpetrate a wrong upon the public—those cultured, educated, refined, and favored mothers capable of the endowment—when they permit their children to go to public schools and resign to employed instructors that which should be imparted to the offspring at home. That is, the wealthy, or the mother of moderate means, in a position to devote her time to her children, who allows them to be educated at the public schools commits a grievous wrong by sending them to the public school, thereby crowding therefrom the child of the mother of modest or no means who has no other avenue of according her offspring its rightful privilege of imbibing at the public fount of knowledge.

Summing it all up, Mrs. Stoner believes the mother shapes the child's future. The result of the application of Mrs. Stoner's theory is Winifred Sackville Stoner, Jr. Her progress was as follows:

Age 1.—She could walk, talk, recite Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," and scan from Virgil.

Age 2.—She could read in English and speak French.

Age 3.—She was able to write on the typewriter, and began to write original rhymes.

Age 5.—Traveled with her mother to various Chautauque assemblies in the United States and spoke in behalf of Esperanto.

Age 6.—Wrote rhymes for magazines and newspapers, and received a silver medal from St. Nicholas Magazine for verses.

Age 7.—Became a chess player and published her first book entitled "Jingles."

Age 8.—Published her second book, "Patrius Anserius" or Mother Goose in Esperanto; was able to speak in eight languages, and demonstrated a remarkable knowledge of history, Latin, literature, geography, physiology and rhetoric.

Age 9.—Published her third book, "Journeys with Fairy Christmas," and has written two other books soon to be published—"Nine Years of Life," (describing her travels over most of the world and her experiences,) and "Journeys with Easter Rabbit," (describing Easter celebrations in various countries.) In "Journeys with Fairy Christmas" the child described an imaginary journey with Fairy Christmas and the celebration of the Yuletide by people of other lands.

Mrs. Stoner was the daughter of a talented Englishman and was educated in England and Paris. She was especially fond of literature, arts and music. Instead of repeating frothy nursery rhymes and crooning senseless songs she rocked her baby to sleep with classical poetry and compositions of the masters.

What was the result? She thinks the child dreamed in faultless meter, difficult meter, and when she began to talk there were not the meaningless nothings of a chaotically impressed mind, but rhythmic phrases, and, later, rhythmic sentences and verse, she having absorbed and assimilated the best that already had been produced. From the recesses of the wonder brain of the child came matured sentiment. She was fed upon it; it was her mental pabulum, contends her mother.

Mrs. Stoner avers that all children should be as hers, and speaks of many things which the mother should do for the child.

"I was the cause of bringing my daughter into the world," she said with frankness. "The child had no voice in the matter. Am I not, therefore, responsible for her future?"

"President Roosevelt and others advocate large families. I think such a creed criminal. The poor woman mothering a large family has responded to the animal in the human race without being capable of rearing her children to an estate and condition which spells happiness. She cannot, by the very reason of her position, give that care to her offspring that every mother should."

"Take the woman of a higher plane—the mother who by reason of her position, her income, her talent or education is able to instruct the child without committing it to the care of instructors in the public schools. If she is to give all of the best of herself to transmit her knowledge to her child—how many can she rear in the best manner? One, or at the most two. Why, then, should she or that other less fortunate woman be urged to mother large families?"

"The man and the woman in old age feed off that which they were taught in childhood. If this teaching is nonsensical, old age is dottering and senile. If the early teaching has been poetical, musical, beautiful, the retrospection of old age is beautiful, fairy-like.

"Are there fairies? Some children are taught that there are not. What foolishness! Certainly there are fairies! The good in us is a good fairy—flimsy, delicate, and beautiful. The bad in us is ugly, a gnome. Figurative, of course, but beautifying and elevating. My little girl believes in fairies—I hope in all things beautiful.

"Will she gain marked achievement in any one line? I hope not. Why should she?"

"Take the so-called prodigy in music, in art, in mathematics, in business, in any one particular line. What have we? Usually one who gives pleasure to others. One who performs for the amusement and edification, instruction, enjoyment or others. Take the mature woman, capable in many accomplishments. Who funds the benefit and the enjoyment? Not only others, but herself.

"I am just selfish enough to hope that my daughter may be the one to derive the greatest advantage and enjoyment from her attainments. I am not hoping to rear her so she may be only an instrument by which others are pleased and edified. 'Cheer' plays, she slugs, she paints, she dances, she speaks several languages, she is sometimes a naughty child—she is just normal and healthy. Being these things she will be able to entertain herself as well as others. So after all, I am not wholly selfish.

"There is another phase which all mothers should consider—the after life. There are many theories. But I do not know where we go, what we become. I have brought a child into this world to face this great problem. What less could I do, honestly, than to fit it for the enjoyment of this life? I do not know what will become of me. I do not know what will become of the child. I know I live. I know she lives, and probably will live after me. I want her to be fitted for the living. My life is hers.

"What is my reward? I have it now. When other mothers at the army posts where my husband was stationed were enjoying the festivities incidental thereto, I was in bed with my baby. She gets sleepy at 6 o'clock in the evening. She was my dream, myself. For this reason I went to bed with her, at 6 o'clock, when she was sleepy; arose when she awoke. I played when she played; I was sad when she was sad, unless I could brighten her. I brought her here and I gave her myself. This is not a sacrifice, but only a mother's duty.

"I have my reward to-day. My child reads to me the works I enjoy. One of my eyes is weak. She enjoys that which I enjoy. She is as myself with other attainments. I have mastered almost a score of languages. My daughter is a little of a linguist. She plays to me, sings to me, talks to me. See, I am rewarded."

From this phase of Mrs. Stoner's conversation one might imagine that she is in the Autumn of her vigor. Such, however, is not the case. She is a vivacious matron, aglow mentally and physically energetic.

To return to the child. She was born at Norfolk, Va., on Aug. 10, 1902, and is proud of being a Virginian. At present she is enthusiastic in the cause of equal suffrage. She belongs to the Equal Franchise Federation of Pennsylvania, and also of Virginia. She says she became a suffragist after hearing an ignorant old Savannah colored man declare that women folks did not amount to anything because they could not vote. She considers it an insult to womanhood that they should be classed with lunatics and convicts, and even as inferior to ignorant colored men. Therefore she is devoting a great deal of her time to writing rhymes for the suffrage cause. One of these rhymes was recently used by the women of the Norfolk Equal Franchise Federation as a printed valentine greeting.

One of Miss Stoner's franchise poems has been set to music and is sung as a suffragist song.

For a time her mother feared that she would be backward in learning mathematics, but she soon discovered that the fault lay in the way in which she was attempting to teach the child. She gave her into the hands of a more competent mathematician, Prof. Horbrook of Chicago, and the child has made rapid strides through the realms of the good Giant Arithmetic, as she calls arithmetic. Mrs. Stoner has also received help from several other noted professors in instructing the child in various branches. Prof. Edgar Lucien Larkin of Mount Lowe Observatory has given little Winifred instruction in astronomical geography and has written a book on meteorology, "Within the Mind Maze," which he says was inspired by this little girl.

The child is developed along physical lines as well as mental. She is a perfectly healthy, rosy-cheeked, dark-eyed youngster. She is inclined to enjoy boyish sports such as swimming, horseback riding, gymnastics and trapeze work, skating, climbing trees, and running races. These are her sunny day joys, but when she must remain in doors she loves to paint, model in clay, dance, sew, knit, crochet, play on the piano, write rhymes and plays, and, above all, read good books.

"One cannot begin too early," says Mrs. Stoner, "to train the child's mind, which is like wax. Early impressions are lasting. When we grow old we forget things learned at the noonday of life, but go back to the thoughts of the cradle. Happy man is he who has his mind filled with beautiful thoughts in infancy so that when he comes to the evening of life he may enjoy these thoughts, rather than silly tales and rhymes which can afford him no pleasure.

"Mothers who follow the method of early education will never have naughty Johns and Marys, who must be punished with whippings and dark closets. Children trained early to years for draughts from the well of knowledge will be so busy striving to gain this knowledge that they will always be happy—synonymous with good."

THE BEST PROOF

Gettysburg Citizens Cannot Doubt It.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they cured.

The story was told to Gettysburg residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the cure permanent. The testimony is home testimony—The proof convincing.

It can be investigated by Gettysburg residents.

Mrs. T. C. Biddle, 68 E. Middle St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "Two years ago I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills and at this time I am glad to confirm my former statement. A member of my family was in bad shape with kidney complaint and was laid up for eight weeks. Backache was almost constant and there were severe pains through the loins. After several remedies had been tried to no avail, Doan's Kidney Pills were procured at the People's Drug Store and their use was begun. Relief soon followed and there was a remarkable improvement in every way. My advice to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint is to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

TRY THIS

RICHMOND Suction Cleaner

IN YOUR OWN HOME 5 DAYS FREE

We want every woman in America to have the opportunity to try the RICHMOND Suction Cleaner in her own home. And to show our unbounded confidence in the machine, we've decided to send it out on 5 days free trial.

Use it as much as you like. Clean your carpets and rugs, your upholstery, curtains, walls, ceilings, mattresses, pillows, etc.

See for yourself how it makes everything as bright and new as the day it was bought. See how it cleans without raising a particle of dust, how it makes after dusting unnecessary. Watch it get the dirt from under heavy furniture, behind radiators and from other inaccessible places.

Try the nine special attachments which we furnish with every machine—the hair-drying tool, the tools for cleaning clothes, book-shelves, etc.

"RICHMOND" Suction Cleaner

Compare this easy, pleasant method of cleaning with the disagreeable backaching drudgery of brooms, mops and dusters.

Put the machine in every test you can think of.

Then at the end of 5 days if you are willing to part with the machine simply notify us and we'll send for it.

On the other hand if you wish to keep the machine you can pay for it on Easy Monthly Payments out of the actual money which the machine saves for you.

A liberal discount will be allowed those who pay cash.

The experience of most purchasers is that the RICHMOND Suction Cleaner pays for itself in from twelve to thirty months.

It pays for itself, first, because it does away with the annual or semi-annual tear-ups called "housecleaning" (and housecleaning costs more than you think unless you have figured it out).

It pays for itself, second, because it doubles and triples the life of floorcoverings, hangings, furniture, wall paper, decorations, etc.

The RICHMOND Suction Cleaner weighs but 10 pounds. It can easily be carried upstairs, downstairs, anywhere without the least fatigue. It is a truly portable cleaner.

A RICHMOND is built with a view to long durability and we cover it with the broadest possible guarantee. It is simple in construction. There is nothing to wear out. There are no gears, no diaphragms, no valves. Nothing to jiggle loose. To operate, simply attach to any electric lamp socket. Costs about one cent per hour to operate.

Surely you must see that the RICHMOND Suction Cleaner must give perfect service, perfect satisfaction, day after day, month after month, else we could not afford this offer.

But don't take our word for it. Find out for yourself. Try a machine out for risk. It doesn't make good—if it doesn't more than come up to your expectations, simply tell us to take it away. Could anything be more fair?

Remember it costs you nothing if you decide to keep the machine. All we ask is that $1.00 be deposited with us as evidence of good faith and to keep away triflers. The $1.00 will be refunded in case the machine is returned.

Prices Range from $40.00 to $85.00.

Mail the coupon and get full particulars. Do it now while you're thinking of it.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstructed and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstructive coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Speaker Champ Clark Is a National Figure

Missouri's Famous Democrat a Self Made Man and a Statesman.

Foe of No Faction in His Party and Promoter of Harmony.

ONE OF A SERIES OF ARTICLES ON THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

CHAMP CLARK of Missouri seems to be in the most advantageous position of all the men who aspire to the Democratic nomination for president. He is the foe of no faction in his party and satisfactory as a candidate to those who, for personal or geographical reasons, are favoring other men. Champ Clark is the one man in the Democratic party who has achieved a distinct Democratic national success. It was after two years of his minority leadership that his party gained its first national victory in eighteen years. His party recognized this leadership by conferring upon him the highest office in its gift, the second place of power and distinction in the government.

As speaker of the house Mr. Clark has increased his prestige and impress-his present prominent position in the public service and before the country not along easy lines, but in a struggle with other men of high attainments. When he went to congress eighteen years ago he was a new member in a state delegation that never has been surpassed for men of strength and experience. Among them were Bland, Cobb, Dockery, Hatch, Heard, Tarsney and O'Neill, all men of influence and long service. A new man among men of that caliber had difficulty in keeping his head above water, let alone attracting any attention by his own personality and ability.

His Many Rivals.

In those days also it was not usual to give any new man opportunities to display his talents. Seniority and service only were recognized. But Champ

CHAMP CLARK.

Born in Kentucky, March 7, 1850.
Educated Kentucky university, Bethany college and Cincinnati Law school.
President Marshall college, West Virginia, 1873-4.
Moved to Missouri, 1875.
City attorney of Louisiana and Bowling Green.

Prosecuting attorney of Pike county.
Has served in the house more than sixteen years.
Made minority leader in 1908 and speaker in 1911.
Permanent chairman Democratic national convention of 1904.

ed the whole country with his leadership. The harmony in a party whose discords and divisions have kept it in the minority for sixteen years has been largely due to the straightforward course of Speaker Clark, his honesty of purpose and his unquestioned determination to do what was best for his country and his party.

Speakership His Goal.

Champ Clark is a national figure because he long ago chose the national field in politics and statesmanship. He has been tempted by the governorship of his state, by the senatorship, which in Missouri means almost a life position, but he put aside both because it had been his ambition to be speaker of the national house of representatives.

Great as either position seems to the average man, Mr. Clark said that he would rather be speaker one term than to have a guaranteed life position in the senate. No doubt he shrewdly foresaw that if he could successfully manage the minority and afterward unite his party when in power in the house the inevitable result must open the door to any ambition that might lead him to seek higher honors. The hearty approval which has been given Mr. Clark's course as leader of the minority and since as speaker shows the wisdom of his choice.

Champ Clark has made his way to Clark was the kind of man who made an opportunity for himself, and, notwithstanding the refusal of the leaders to give him time to make a speech during the tariff discussion in 1894, he cut into the debate under the five minute rule, and before he had completed his speech a congressional reputation was made and men were asking, "Who is this man Champ Clark anyway?" Missouri had added another name to her list of famous men then in the house.

Through the succeeding years Champ Clark has found himself crowding or being crowded by men who were pursuing a course similar to his own. Turning to the tariff as a subject of politics, he found many others seeking the same pathway to the hall of fame. Always has he had to struggle with men of ability whose lines of ambition converged with those he marked out for himself.

More particularly has this been true in Missouri, where he has generally found a rival for every great position to which he has aspired. In the house of representatives there was a friendly and undesired rivalry between Clark and De Armond for every place which led to their ultimate goal, the speakership. De Armond's death occurred after Clark had won an advantage which made his success assured.

Mr. Clark has had to fight his way day by day and year by year from early life. He secured his education by toiling, foregoing the pleasures of a youth at college and spending his vacations in teaching school. His early career in the practice of law was a struggle in a county where nearly a hundred licensed lawyers were seeking a livelihood at the bar. He had to fight for his early political recognition when he sought a seat in the legislature, and even after once being elected to congress he was retired for a term, due to the great Republican landslide in 1894.

Farmer, Teacher, Lawyer.

Perhaps a brief biography of Speaker Clark should be given right here. He was born in Kentucky in 1850 and is therefore sixty-two years old. He was educated in the common schools, Kentucky university, Bethany college and the Cincinnati Law school and became president of Marshall college, West Virginia, when twenty-three years old. He has worked on a farm, taught school, practiced law, been a member of the state legislature, a presidential elector, delegate to national conventions, has lectured all over the country and been a member of congress since 1893 with the exception of two years. He was permanent chairman of the Democratic national convention in 1904. He was married to Genevieve Bennett in 1881. Four children have been born to them, and two, a boy and a girl, are now living.

While he always intended to go to Missouri when he left Kentucky, for nearly all emigrating Kentuckians went to Missouri in those days, he actually landed in Kansas and was a resident of that state for nine weeks. At the end of that time he was "dead broke" and saw no way of mending his fortunes. Then a college man wrote him and sent him $25, with a request to write a graduating speech. He wrote and sent the speech and with the $25 paid his way to Missouri, going to Moberly. He entered into a contract to teach school for $55 a month; but, meeting a man who told him to try for a better position at Louisiana, Mo., he went there and became the principal of the high school. He looks upon it as an accident that he settled in Pike county rather than Randolph.

He has gained the position he holds by guarding his own self respect and placing his honor and integrity beyond the question of any man. He is sincere of purpose, and once convinced of what is right he cannot be swayed by any consideration of personal disadvantage. He does not wobble.

Champ Clark is a man of the people. Not only the plain, homely Anglo-Saxon words and sentences he uses proclaim his close relationship to the great mass of people, but all his public efforts have been directed toward their welfare and betterment.

Champ Clark is a man without frills. In his personal characteristics he has not changed during all the years he was progressing toward his present position. Each succeeding honor has found him unchanged. As he stands in the shadow of the White House he is in every essential the same Champ Clark that went to congress in 1893, broadened, of course, by study and experience, but with the same characteristics, the same temperament, the same strong personality and hearty humanity that have made friends wherever he is known.

In an article of this kind—all too brief—it is impossible to recount the many interesting phases in the character of a man who has been under one's observation for nearly a score of years. The dominant impression is made by Speaker Clark's vigorous intellectuality, but there are also the strong character, the quaint humor, the fund of anecdote and good stories, the broad intelligence and comprehensive knowledge that combine to make him a delightful companion and attractive acquaintance. A grim smile sometimes—not often—is about the only indication of his enjoyment of the many good things he hears and appreciates. He never makes a speech without a touch of humor in it, but he is neither a funny man nor a humorist. He takes life and its responsibilities too seriously to be either.

Speaker Clark has made a study of many questions, and in an interesting way he blends history and anecdote. He will speak of the enactment of a tariff bill in some congress far beyond the recollection of any man living and will then show how that bill affected the political fortunes of the men of the time, or it may be some other act of congress or a speech, in fact, any incident which made history and at the same time created greatness in some men and destroyed others.

A Call From the People.

It has been a fascinating study to watch the development of a great man like Champ Clark. He emerges from the ruck or common herd of congressmen; he shows head and shoulders above them; he takes his place among and jostles those who long have been recognized as leaders; he crowds one after another aside until he finally stands forth the embodiment of a strong, vigorous leader. In all this time he has met "foemen worthy of his steel" on the opposite side and never flinched or faltered. It is such a rise, such an advance, that marks the man, and it is only in the American congress that such a career is possible. It is in this arena where Clay, Blaine, Garfield, Reed and McKinley made their reputations that Champ Clark has achieved success. And his career has been of his own making. Endowed with the capacity, equipped with the education, spurred by laudable ambition, he carried his banner to the highest pinnacle of the legislative range and has called forth a demand among the people that he shall become the standard bearer of a great party in this presidential year.

National Delegate Candidate.
Charles M. Kerr of Wrightsville, York county, has announced himself as a candidate for delegate to the Democratic National Convention to be held in Baltimore in June. Mr. Kerr has long been an admirer of Governor Wilson of New Jersey, and has a brother, the Rev. John T. Kerr, of Elizabethtown, N. J., who was a classmate of Governor Wilson at Princeton.

Following is Mr. Kerr's letter:
To the Democracy of the Twentieth Congressional District:
I desire to announce my candidacy for delegate to the Democratic National Convention, which meets in Baltimore June 25th, 1912, to select a candidate for President on the Democratic ticket.

I am a great admirer of Woodrow Wilson and am heartily in accord with the lofty principles of good government for which he stands and, if chosen to represent this district at the coming National Convention, I shall do all in my power to have him nominated for President of the United States.

Thanking all for their influence and support, I am,
Respectfully,
CHARLES M. KERR.

National Delegate Candidate.
To the Democracy of the Twentieth Congressional District:

I hereby announce my candidacy for delegate to the Democratic National Convention, which meets in Baltimore June 25, 1912, to select a candidate for President on the Democratic ticket.

We are entering upon a period of remarkable business efficiency all over the country, and it seems to me that we should make every effort to introduce this particular kind of efficiency into government as well as into commerce. I have watched with a great deal of interest Woodrow Wilson's advent into politics. All his life he has made a careful scientific study of political government, and from his speeches one can easily learn that he has ideas and convictions upon governmental problems far in advance of any one in public life today, and by his governorship of New Jersey he has abundantly shown that he has

Germans Spread in Skin

Eczema, Psoriasis and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, gnawing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years of misery.
Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema. A 25c bottle will prove this to you.
We have had experience with many remedies for skin trouble, but have never seen such remarkable cures as those from D. D. D. Prescription. Instant relief from the very first application.
We are so confident that D. D. D. will reach our case that it will cost you nothing if the very first full size bottle fails to make good every claim. If you have skin trouble of any kind we certainly advise you to drop in and investigate the merits of D. D. D. anyway. We know that D. D. D. will help you.

the ability to deal with concrete governmental problems.
My observation of Woodrow Wilson's activities has only served to increase my admiration for him, and to strengthen my conviction that he is the one man to lead Democracy to success next fall.
If chosen to represent this district at the coming National convention, I shall do all I can to have him nominated for president of the United States.

Announcement.
To the Sterling Democracy of the 20th Congressional District:

After over half a century of unselfish and devoted service in the ranks of the Democratic party and a wheel horse in every campaign in support of the party nominees, I have, bowing to the persuasion of numerous Democratic friends, consented to become a candidate for the distinctive honor of representing the Democracy of the 20th Congressional District as one of the two delegates to the Democratic National Convention, to assemble in Baltimore, June 25th, 1912. Having no personal ends to serve, if chosen, I go there myself with substitution, to represent the Democracy of my district. Their choice of a candidate shall be my choice and receive my vote unbossed, without dictation from any person. As the chosen representative of the Democracy I pledge myself to obey their every wish in the selection of a candidate. This is the platform upon which I stand and in announcing my determination to become a candidate, I most respectfully ask the support and influence of my fellow Democrats.

A. Mitchell Palmer, the reorganization candidate for National Committeeman from Penn'a and I believe this to be a very important issue. Thanking one and all for their influence and support.
Very respectfully,
E. L. ECKERT.

Golden Weddings and Others.

Capt. and Mrs. Calvin Gilbert of Springs Avenue celebrated their golden wedding anniversary yesterday—Tuesday, March 12. Capt. Gilbert was in the army in 1862 and came home on a furlough in March and made Miss Lavina Rex of Lancaster, his bride, the ceremony being performed at Lancaster.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Culp of Water St. on Monday evening, March 11 celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home. The maiden name of Mrs. Culp was Miss Margaret E. Steinhour and the marriage of 50 years ago took place in Gettysburg, Rev. Abram Essick performing the ceremony.

To the brides and grooms of a half century ago the COMPILER extends best wishes for length of days and a happy journey onward.
